It may be deemed a source of satisfaction that the number of houses put into a sanitary condition has increased so steadily from year to year but this satisfaction is moderated by the reflecttion that the total number of houses in the City of Victoria is about 7,900, and that the propor tion of buildings so treated to those that remain unaffected is consequently still small. Of course, a considerable number of properties have been rebuilt since the passing of the Public Health Ordinance, and the drains of these are presumably in accordance with the requirements of that statute, but there can be little doubt that a large proportion of the Chinese houses in the City of Viotoria are still in a condition which from sanitary point of view, calls for reform. I think that (the public sewers being now completed over a large part of the city) the time has come when owners of property might reasonably be called upon to reform their drainage arrangements upon Kim Ok Kinn was the head of the Coroan a somewhat more systematic plan than has been in rebellion of 1884-in which His Excellency Min | vogue hitherto: At present, the complaint of a neighbour or of a tonant, or perhaps he cheervation of one of the Board's Inspectors, leads to an examination of one or two, or possibly balf a dozen houses out of a large block. The principal increase appears under the heads Infantile Convalsive Diseases (270), Bowel Com-

The decrease in the number of deaths recorded of the same age and of being used for the same as occurring from fevers, which was referred to The Acting Secretary to the Sanitary purposes and by the same class of tanants h and in the Superintendent's report of last year, has At the Magistracy yesterday L. C. Airey, of Board reported that the death rate for the week that an inspection should be made accordingly; been equally actionable in 1893. As the figures and conditions are very similar it may be of nterest to repeat here what was stated by Sanitary Superintendent a year ago :-

> The decrease in the number of deaths recorded as occurring from fevers is deserving of special attention chiefly because of the widely believed theory that soil disturbance, aven when the soil is practically of a purely mineral character, is the principal factor or rather one of the principal actors in the causation of malarial fevery. Durog the year under raview there has been a very great deal of soil disturbance, more especially in Kowloon, yet the death's recorded from fevers have bests less than usual. It is so doubt true that the number of deaths caused by any particular disease s not a thoroughly reliable index to the number cases of sickness that may have occurred, but it is an index and the only one which wa present possess so far as the Chinese community s congarned. It is perfectly clear that some important factor in the causation of malignant malarial fevers has been during 1892 (and 1898) less powerful than usual, and it is quite evident that such factor is not to be found in the circomstances of a smaller quantity of soil disturbance having taken place."

The death rates for the year have been es sulated from the figures obtained by the ceasus taken in May/1891, plus an estimated increase anded 31st December, 1893. to the population since then.
